"The best part of law school was the empowerment I gained through knowledge, the mentors I gained through the alumni network, and the passion I gained for making a difference through exposure and hands-on experience. My passion for corporate change gives me a strong voice to make an impact, and my USF law degree allows me to be heard."

Arlette Noujaim '17, Corporate Counsel, Accela Inc.

"Going to law school at USF gave me the unique opportunity to share space for three years with a diverse group of students and professors who are constantly questioning, challenging, and defending their beliefs. I used to think that differences in opinion cause conflict and conflicts should be avoided. I now embrace contrast as an opportunity to strengthen the community."

Joe Lewis '17, Associate, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP

"I was inspired to go to law school when I saw the inequality of access to the legal system in my own community. After I experienced it myself firsthand, I realized that if I could change my own reality by going to law school, I could eventually come back to support my community. The most rewarding part about my work so far is feeling myself grow and improve as an attorney."

Tarah Powell-Chen '17, Associate, Murphy Pearson Bradley & Feeney

"I've been able to immediately put my USF law degree to use, working on product and privacy counseling and litigation. But more importantly, my USF legal education emphasized the responsibility to remember that the decisions we make impact others who depend on us. My professors made sure that we understood the power that would be entrusted to us as lawyers, and the responsibility that comes with such power."

Sean Lim '17, Corporate Counsel, Discord Inc.

"Law school was the ultimate opportunity to challenge myself intellectually while setting myself up for a fulfilling career in public service. At USF, students and faculty are genuinely interested in everyone's combined success. Working as a district attorney allows me to represent the interests of the community by getting justice for victims while ensuring the defendant receives a fair trial."

Shashawnya Worley '17, Assistant District Attorney, Solano County
